| Laskowski Papers mention a place called Walnut Landing in this location. The house standing on the property has the form of an early 19th century Federal style form house. It, however, appears to date from the late century as there is a central door with sidelights and transom. The three bay long, two story building stands on a concrete block foundation. There are brick chimneys in each gable and there is an 'L' addition on the east side of the north facade. It is in good condition, although aluminum siding is being installed. Adjacent the house is an interesting frame outbuilding, one and one-half storys tall with two doors on the west side and a louvered window between. Louvered openings are also located on the gables. It stands on brick piers and is white washed. | | | |

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This building is important because its form is a carryover of the earlier Federal farmhouse and because there is an unusual early outbuilding.

Walnut Landing is also important because of its association with Governor Thomas King Carroll and his family. This was the home of Governor Carroll's son, Dr. Thomas King Carroll, born at Kingston Hall, Somerset County, in 1821. He attended Washington Academy in Somerset County and graduated from University of Maryland Medical School. He was petitioned to serve the people of Dorchester County and there lived and practiced medician until his death in 1900.

It is said that the original house burned and was rebuilt by Dr. Carroll's daughter, Nellie Calvert Carroll.
